

Security Treasure Hunt

Got Cyber Skills? Compete for Training - Make Cool Contacts

Become one of 16 lucky college students in Delaware to receive free industry training by cyber security professionals at a camp this summer. Students are invited to compete for a spot at the camp via the Security Treasure Hunt.

The Delaware Competition is being held online from May 1st through May 16th, 2010.

The Security Treasure Hunt will test students' abilities to identify vulnerabilities in a virtual network and answer questions related to their findings. Those who finish in the top 16 will be invited to attend the cyber camp free of charge, at Wilmington University August 9-13, 2010.

At the cyber camp, participants will engage in Web-delivered training sessions and exercises on topics ranging from intrusion detection to forensics. These classes will be taught by leading SANS Institute faculty, and accompanied by workshops, labs, and competitions, conducted in person by faculty members from various universities, security practitioners across industries, and the U.S. government.

Participants who excel at the camps will be put in touch with government agencies and major technology companies. Some participants will also qualify for SANS course scholarships.

To compete, sign up at www.securitytreasurehunt.com

For Delaware rules and eligibility, see

www.dti.delaware.gov/information/cybersecurity\_challenge.shtml

www.sans.org

